WYOMING AVENUE HOME HAS FIFTEEN ROOMS AND FIVE BATHS, WITH SEPARATE SERVANTS' QUARTERS, ETC.

THREE HANDSOME HOUSES.

Residences Just Completed in Heights Have Unusual Features.

One of the handsomest residences in the northwest section is that at 2319 Wyoming avenue, just being completed by D. J. Dunigan. The house contains fifteen rooms and five baths, with complete separate servants' quarters.

Of brick construction, the front of the house is of light tapestry brick with heavy ornamental terra cotta trimmings and decorations. The main floor of the house is divided into reception hall, drawing rooms, music and dining rooms, while the second floor contains four master bedrooms, sleeping porches and a spacious library. The third floor, besides bedrooms, has a billiard room extending the full width of the house. In the basement is a complete laundry, a boiler room and cold storage rooms. The same operator has also completed two handsome residences at 2322 and 2324 California street northwest. Both of these homes contain twelve rooms and three baths, with sleeping porches and a complete servants' quarters. They also have built-in garages reached by driveways from the street. The front of the houses is of stone and red Harvard brick, the other being of buff tapestry brick with Indiana limestone trimmings. The houses have a frontage of twenty-three feet with ample depth.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

Peter Rabbit Worries About Old Mr. Toad.

When Peter Rabbit finally bade Old Mr. Toad good night and left him there at the bottom of the great pit which Farmer Brown's boy had dug in a corner of his garden and into which Old Mr. Toad had fallen, he went straight home to the dear old Brier Patch to think. As a true quaddy he felt that he just had to do something to help Old Mr. Toad out of his trouble. He remembered how Old Mr. Toad had journeyed clear over to the Old Brier Patch that time when he was made so ill by eating poisoned cabbage leaves. It was no journey at all for Peter, but it was very much of a journey for Old Mr. Toad, and he had come, out of the goodness of his heart, to try to help Peter. Now Old Mr. Toad himself was in trouble, and Peter wanted to repay that kindness by helping him.

But how could he help? That was the question that Peter turned over and over in his mind as he sat in his favorite place in the dear Old Brier Patch. It seemed to him that Old Mr. Toad was in about as bad a fix as it was possible to be in. Mr. Toad couldn't climb. Even if he could it wouldn't have done him any good in that place. Happy Jack Squirrel himself couldn't climb out of that hole, because the sides were so straight and were wholly of sand, which would give way when any one tried to climb. So far as Peter could see Old Mr. Toad was a helpless prisoner. Peter Rabbit says so. Perhaps that is because Peter never does a great deal of real thinking. He is very apt to do things without thinking and this is one reason he is forever getting into scrapes. If he did a little more real thinking he wouldn't get into trouble so often. But now he was doing some real thinking all on account of Old Mr. Toad, and yet it didn't help a bit as he could see. He just couldn't think of any one who could get Old Mr. Toad out of that pit unless it was Farmer Brown's boy. He could do it. He could do anything. At least that is the way he seemed to Peter. But how could he get Farmer Brown's boy out of the pit? That was a trouble. All of Peter's thinking always ended right there. The way of letting Farmer Brown's boy know unless Peter happened air lift him the air in excitement. He could find Sammy Jay and get him to go over to that pit in the garden and scream until Farmer Brown's boy should come to see what such a fuss was about. Without waiting another minute off started Peter Rabbit to hunt for a cat. Those people always sure to be around when not wanted, and one that he wanted he wasn't to be found. No one knew where he was. No one remembered having seen him that day. The fact is, Sammy had taken it into his head to go over to the Old Pasture that day. So Peter waited the Old Orchard and the Great Forest in vain. At last he had to give up. Night was coming on, and Sammy Jay would be of no use then, for he sleeps at night. Peter would have to wait until the next day. Meanwhile he worried about Old Mr. Toad. He knew that Mr. Toad does not like the hot sun. In fact, it makes him quite ill. Jolly, bright Mr. Sun had been shining his very brightest all that day. It must have been awfully hot down in that pit, thought Peter. "Toad Old Mr. Toad must have suffered a great deal. And he must be hungry. How ever will he get anything to eat down there? I am afraid that if he has to spend another day down there it will quite finish him. Why ever did I do that? I have been around when he was wanted." Peter was actually beginning to feel that it was really Sammy's fault, when, of course, it wasn't any thing of the kind. "Anyway, as soon as I've had a bite to eat I'll run over to the garden and tell Mr. Toad that I have been trying my very best to do something for him. I hope he hasn't suffered very much, but I'm most afraid to go see." You know Peter is very tender hearted. So Peter ate a hurried meal, and shortly after jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed behind the purple hills Peter started to see how Old Mr. Toad was feeling after that long hot day at the bottom of that great hole.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING, TOPIC.

Development Methods Explained by H. F. Lowe, School Principal.

Lines along which vocational work may be developed and extended in the southeast section of the city were described by H. F. Lowe, principal of the Lenox Vocational School, in an address Thursday afternoon before the Cranch-Tyler Home and School Association at its first meeting for the season, held in the Tyler building. Mr. Lowe spent the summer in New York studying the work which is being done there in vocational instruction.

Additional ground for the Cranch School and the purchase of a site at 13th street and Potomac avenue were requested in resolutions adopted. Miss M. E. Wood was elected vice president to fill a vacancy.

now University. It was Rev. Mr. Davies who, speaking before King George III of England in the interest of the college and being interrupted by the king, who expressed amusement at the eloquence of the speaker, rebuked the monarch with the words: "When the King of Kings speaks, let the kings of the earth keep silence."

Died in 1793.

Rev. Mr. Hunt died June 2, 1797, according to the inscription on the headstone at his grave. His successor was Rev. Adam Freeman, who died in 1800. Rev. Dr. Conrad Speers of Virginia succeeded

Rev. Mr. Freeman, remaining until 1805, when he returned to Virginia. He was succeeded by Dr. Samuel Martin, who in turn was succeeded by Rev. Dr. J. T. Russell. The old church burned in 1820, and the site was sold to the Methodist congregation, the Presbyterians reserving only the burying ground. The Cabin John church, as it is still called, is the present church on the Rockville pike. A few years later this church also burned, and in 1856 the present church was built. At that time Rev. John Hines, who had come to the church as pastor in 1822, and Rev. Randolph Smith, co-pastor, served the church and the Presbyterian Church at Montgomery Court House, now Rockville, which was also a mission of the original Cabin John Church. Rev. Mr. Smith was followed in 1859 by Rev. E. H. Compton, who served until 1872, when he was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. Parker D. Morrison, who has served continuously since that year.
